

2020 UPDATES

In 2020, the arts discipline eligible for Arts Legacy Fund grants is Media Arts.

As a way to ensure that this Arts Legacy funding benefits artists working in all disciplines, the granting focus changes each year, rotating among media arts (2020), music (2021), dance (2022) theatre arts (2023), literary arts (2024) visual arts (2025). If your arts proposal does not qualify under this year's arts discipline (i.e., is not media arts related), you can still apply for a general Osprey grant.

Please note Video and Film-Making projects are not eligible as they fall under the Visual Arts category. See attached for a definition Media Art as it relates to the BC Arts Legacy grant.

The Arts Legacy Fund provides an annual grant of approximately $2600; however, this amount may be divided into more than one grant, or increased using additional Community Fund granting dollars.

BACKGROUND

In the 1990s, Nelson hosted the BC Festival of the Arts, a showcase and workshop for young and emerging artists from across British Columbia. In receiving the privilege of hosting this event together with the accompanying financial assistance from the provincial government, the local host organizing committee agreed that any profit generated by the festival would be turned over to the City of Nelson as a legacy to be used for a purpose consistent with the festival objectives. On the recommendation of the committee, the City of Nelson subsequently agreed to endow the BC Festival of the Arts Legacy proceeds with the Osprey Community Foundation for the purposes of providing an annual grant for local artists, preferably involving young or emerging artists, to create or perform a work of art. Osprey has supplemented the original endowment with matching funds from the Vancouver Foundation and the Columbia Basin Trust.

HOW INDIVIDUAL ARTISTS CAN APPLY FOR ARTS LEGACY FUND GRANTS

As a registered charitable foundation, the Osprey Community Foundation is restricted by law to making grants to "qualified donees" as defined under the federal Income Tax Act. This limitation means that individual artists are NOT eligible to receive grants from The Osprey Community Foundation in their own name. The application must come from a registered charity.

However, Osprey recognizes that the intent of the Arts Legacy Fund is to enable local artists to create works of art for the benefit of Nelson and area residents and that it is natural to expect that individual artists or groups of artists will be the most likely source of ideas for worthwhile projects.

Artists familiar with an arts organization or other suitable charity that is already registered with the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) and has a CRA business number, could approach that organization for sponsorship of the project and submit a grant application to Osprey under the auspices of that organization. Feel free to call the Osprey Community Foundation if you would like more information on how to do that. Once the application is approved by Osprey, the sponsoring organization can then engage the artist(s) to implement the project either as employees or contractors of their organization. Please note that the sponsoring organization must accept full legal responsibility for the project.

SELECTION CRITERIA

In addition to the generic selection criteria listed in the Granting Guidelines applicable to all Osprey grants, applications for Arts Legacy Fund grants will also be assessed against the following arts-specific criteria. Please note that successful projects do not necessarily have to contain all these elements; however, the stronger they reflect these criteria, the greater their likelihood of success.

Applicants should ensure they include appropriate information in their application to enable the Osprey Community Foundation review panel to assess how their proposal meets these specific criteria. If there is insufficient space on the Application Form to address these criteria, please attach an additional page to your application.

1. Mentorship

The project includes mentorship opportunities for young and emerging artists.

2. Artistic merit or excellence

The artists who will carry out the project have demonstrated competence in their field, and in the opinion of the Osprey arts advisory panel, the work or activity to be carried out under the project has significant artistic merit that will enhance the arts reputation and/or capacity of the Nelson area.

3. Originality/Innovation

The project includes an element of originality or introduces a new artistic experience to the Nelson area. In addition to the creation of a new artist work, originality/innovation would also include such elements as the premier performance of a work in the Nelson area or the introduction of a form of artistic expression new to the Nelson area.

4. Local interest, involvement and relevance

The project has significant connection to the Nelson area through the individuals involved in implementing the project, those who will create the artistic work involved, and/or the nature or theme of the work itself. that individual artists or groups of artists will be the most likely source of ideas for worthwhile projects.

Media Art

"Media art" refers to artworks that depend on a technological component to function. The term "media" applies to any communication device used to transmit and store information. By incorporating emerging technologies into their artworks, artists using new media are constantly redefining the traditional categories of art.

Numerous artistic disciplines have fallen under the umbrella of "media art", including:

- Biotech Art
- Computer Art
- Digital Art
- Electronic Art
- Interactive Art
- Kinetic Art
- Multimedia Art
- Network Art
- Robotic Art
- Sound Art
- Space Art
- Technological Art
- Video Art
- Web Art
